

1. The Weight of the Water Glass

A popular professor began his class by holding up a glass of water. He raised it high for all his students to see and asked, 'How heavy do you think this glass of water is?' The students shouted out answers ranging from 100 to 500 grams. The professor smiled and replied, 'From my perspective, the absolute weight of this glass does not matter at all. It all depends on how long I hold it. If I hold it for a single minute, it feels perfectly light. If I hold it continuously for an hour, my arm will begin to ache. If I hold it up for an entire day, my arm will become completely paralyzed and numb, forcing me to drop it. In each case, the weight of the glass never changes, but the longer I hold it, the heavier it becomes.'

THENGATCHI'S INSIGHT

The anxieties, stresses, and worries of life are exactly like this glass of water. Think about them for a few minutes, and they are manageable. Think about them all day long, and they will completely paralyze your spirit. Remember to put the glass down before your arm gives out.

2. The True Secret to Heaven

An arrogant wealthy merchant and a humble, poor farmer passed away on the exact same day. Their souls arrived simultaneously at the gates of Heaven. The guardian deity welcomed them and immediately escorted the poor farmer to a beautiful, luxurious mansion situated in the prime celestial district. The wealthy merchant, expecting an even grander treatment due to his immense earthly status, was shocked when he was led to a very small, simple cottage on the quiet outskirts of paradise. Furious and insulted, the merchant marched back to the guardian deity and demanded an explanation. 'On Earth, I lived in a palatial estate and funded grand temples! Why does this penniless farmer get a magnificent mansion while I am relegated to a tiny hut?' The deity sighed and replied calmly, 'My dear man, do not bring your earthly metrics here. On Earth, thousands of people like this farmer arrived in Heaven every single day, yet they maintained their integrity and kindness. But a wealthy merchant who leaves his greed behind and thinks of others is an extreme rarity. We gave the farmer a mansion because he earned it through pure devotion, and we built your cottage based strictly on the tiny amount of genuine, unselfish goodness you sent up.'

THENGATCHI'S INSIGHT

Earthly wealth can buy you a prime plot of land in the city, but only unselfish kindness and true humility can secure you a prime plot in the hearts of others—and in the afterlife.

3. The Flawless Marble Statue

A master sculptor spent several months carefully carving a stunning marble statue of a divine deity. Before placing it inside the village temple, he decided to test public opinion. He placed the statue in the middle of the bustling village square with a prominent sign that read: 'Please place an X mark on any area where you find a flaw or mistake.' By the time evening arrived, the sculptor was heartbroken to discover that the entire statue was completely covered in black ink marks. Every single inch of his masterpiece had been criticized. Disheartened, he wanted to break it. However, a wise elder stopped him and suggested a different approach. The next morning, the sculptor wiped the statue clean and put it back in the square with a new sign: 'Here are some brushes and paints. If you find any flaw, please be kind enough to correct it.' The statue stood there for an entire week, and not a single person touched it.

THENGATCHI'S INSIGHT

It takes absolutely no skill or intelligence to point out faults in others; anyone can do it. However, pointing out a way to fix those faults requires true wisdom and character—which most critics completely lack.

4. The Lazy Man and the Golden Opportunity

A benevolent king wanted to help a notoriously lazy man in his kingdom who constantly complained of poverty. The king told him, 'Come to my royal treasury tomorrow morning. You may collect as much gold, silver, and precious jewels as you can personally carry out by sunset.' The lazy man was overjoyed and ran home to share the incredible news with his wife. His wife urged him to go immediately, but he insisted, 'The offer is for tomorrow! Let me enjoy a hearty lunch first.' The next morning, he woke up late. After eating a very heavy breakfast, he decided to take a short nap to gather his strength. When he finally woke up, it was late afternoon. He slowly walked toward the palace with a large sack. Just as his feet reached the massive treasury gates, the sun dipped completely below the horizon, and the heavy iron doors slammed shut right in front of his face.

THENGATCHI'S INSIGHT

Fortune and opportunity may knock on your door, but they will never wait around for you to finish your nap. Procrastination is the ultimate thief of a prosperous life.

5. The Blind Man and the Lantern

In a quiet village, a man who had been completely blind since birth was walking down a pitch-dark alleyway late at night. Despite his inability to see, he was carrying a brightly lit oil lantern high above his head. A young traveler passing by noticed this and chuckled to himself. He approached the blind man and asked mockingly, 'Old man, you cannot see anything anyway. Why on earth are you wasting your precious oil carrying a lantern?' The blind man paused, smiled gently, and replied, 'My dear son, this bright light is not meant for my eyes, as I live in perpetual darkness. I carry this lantern so that reckless people like you do not accidentally stumble over me in the dark and hurt both themselves and me.' The young traveler blushed in deep shame and apologized for his thoughtless arrogance.
